News and Comment of Stage Matters and Other Gossip.

"My Friend From India," which will be the attraction at the Grand to-night, has the reputation of being the funniest and cleanest farce now being presented on the road, and is giving satisfaction in every city where it is produced. The play has delighted many Paris theatre-goers who will enjoy another laughing spell at its ludicrous situations to-night. The Mt. Sterling Saturday Democrat of Tuesday says: "Smith & Rice Comedians, in the laughing success 'My Friend From India,' was the attraction at the Grand Saturday evening. The company is a strong one and the play the best laugh impeller on the road. We commend the company to the amusement-loving public of neighboring cities they may visit. It is a first-class play interpreted by first-class."

The Great Star Triumvirate, Lewis James, Kathryn Kidder and Charles Hanford, will be seen at the Lexington Opera House Wednesday, November 15, in a mammoth production of Shakespeare's beautiful pastoral comedy, "The Winter's Tale." The Triumvirate is now accepted as the greatest legitimate organization since the days of Booth, Barrett and Modjeska, and in their magnificent scenic revival of "The Winter's Tale" give the patrons of the theatre a distinct novelty. The production will be the most elaborate, massive and complete ever attempted, and will afford many startling scenic effects made from the most authentic models and painted by a corps of capable artists. A special feature will be "The Sheep-Shearing Festival" in the last act, where the Peasant Dance is introduced. Two cars will be utilized in the transportation of the production. The organization numbers upwards of forty people.

There were many persons in the audience which saw "Faust" played Tuesday night at the Grand, disappointed in not seeing Lewis Morrison in the leading part. Though Morrison still owns the production he is this week in New Orleans playing "Frederick The Great." Walter McCullough, who was the Mephisto Tuesday night, did some creditable acting in several scenes but marred his work by descending to low comedy methods and using his demagogical laugh too often. Elwin Gallagher as Valentine was probably the best of the cast. Win Richards made an indifferent Faust. Miss Augusta True was a fair Marguerite, and Addie Farwell was a comical Martha. The electrical effects were very good, but the scenic effects were not up to the Morrison standard. Considering that this was "Faust's" fifth visit in recent years, the play was well patronized.

SPECIAL OPERA ANNOUNCEMENT.

The sale of single tickets for the Grand Opera Company's engagement in Cincinnati on November 9, 10, and 11, began yesterday, and seats were sold to parties in thirty-three cities near Cincinnati. Two important announcements were made yesterday. Mme. Calve is once more in good health and spirits and sang with great success Wednesday in St. Louis. Most welcome, however, is the statement that Franklin Milka Terina, who has just arrived in New York, has been induced by Mr. Gran to come to Cincinnati with the other great artists who are to join the company there, and, therefore, she will be heard on next Friday evening as Elsa in "Lohengrin." Just what this means to music lovers can be imagined when the names of Schumann-Heink, Edouard de Reszke and Van Dyck are listed to appear in that grand work. With such a great cast for "Lohengrin," with Mme. Calve, M. Selez, Suzanne Adams and Sig. Campanari in "Carmen" Thursday evening; Mme. Calve, M. Selez, and M. Plaucon in "Faust" at the Saturday matinee, and Mme. Sembrich, Edouard de Reszke, Campanari and M. Salignac in "The Barber of Seville" Saturday evening, it can safely be said that Mr. Gran presents casts for his Cincinnati season that will equal, if not surpass, anything that has been offered the public for a long time. The entire house is reserved for each performance (including the gallery), the price being $3 and $4 on the lower floor, $3 and $2 in the first balcony, and the gallery $1.50. Seats can be ordered from John Church Music Co., Cincinnati.

STOCK AND TURF NEWS
Sales and Transfers of Stock, Crop, Etc.,
Turf Notes.

C. Alexander, Jr., has bought from Woodford county parties 112 stock cattle.

Nearly 800 people attended Johnathan Smith's sale last week near Centerville. Milch cows sold at $25 to $50; yearling cattle, of about 700 pounds weight $33; 2-year-old cattle, $50, about 5 cents per pound; horses $10 to $100; male colts, $40; 53 sheep, $4.65 per head; hogs, $4 per cwt.; brood sows, $7 to $10.

The sale of Shorthorn cattle owned by Jos. Lucas, of Harrison, and E. N. Hiatt, of Eminence, occurred Wednesday at Lexington. Fifteen animals brought $1,765, an average of $117. The best price obtained was $275 for Maggie White, by Prince Galba. Desha Lucas, of this city, bought Duchess of Peri 6th for $90.

Bishop, Hibler & Bros.' sale Tuesday was attended by a large crowd. Auctioneer A. T. Forsyth reports as follows: Horses $40 to $100; cows and calves $35 to $57.50; 2-year-old steers $44.25; yearling steers $33.50; weanling calves $18 to $22; heifers $28.25 to $30; Shorthorn bull $50; small sows and pigs $9 to $13; sows $8 to $40.50; hay $9.60 per ton; corn in field $2 per barrel; 1 Duroc sow and 12 pigs $35; 1 Poland China sow and 6 pigs $35; Shropshire down ewes $8; Shropshire down buck lamb $10; farm implements sold well.

It was one of these experimental farmers, who put green spectacles on his cow and fed her shavings. His theory was that it didn't matter what the cow ate so long as she was fed. The questions of digestion and nourishment had not entered into his calculations.

It's only a "tenderfoot" farmer that would try such an experiment with a cow. But many a farmer feeds himself regardless of digestion and nutrition. He might almost as well eat shavings for all the good he gets out of his food. The result is that the stomach grows "weak," the action of the organs of digestion and nutrition are impaired and the man suffers the miseries of dyspepsia and the agonies of nervousness.

To strengthen the stomach, restore the activity of the organs of digestion and nutrition and nourish the nerves, use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is an unfailing remedy, and has the confidence of physicians as well as the praise of thousands healed by its use.

In the strictest sense "Golden Medical Discovery" is a temperance medicine. It contains neither intoxicants nor narcotics, and is as free from alcohol as from opium, cocaine and other dangerous drugs. Don't let a dealer delude you for his own profit. There is no medicine for stomach and blood "just as good" as "Golden Medical Discovery."

"I can say to you, one bottle of your 'Golden Medical Discovery' has cured me sound and well, after suffering two long years with stomach disease," writes W. H. Braswell, of McAdenville, Gaston Co., N. C. "My health is worth all the world to me. I will praise you as long as I live."

BY FLANK MOVEMENT

Two Thousand British, With Six Large Cannon, Forced to Surrender to the Boers.

WERE OUTGENERATED BY JOUBERT

Queen Victoria Is Credited With Expressing Sincere Pity for Gen. Sir George Stewart White.

The Government Officials Are in Nowise Inclined to Judge Him Harshly—The Public, However, Still Severely Criticize the General.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—There was a continuous stream of callers at the war office until a late hour, everybody anxiously inquiring regarding Monday's casualties, but the war office declared that nothing had been received since Sir George White's dispatch communicating the news of the capture of the Royal Irish Fusiliers and the Gloucestershire regiment.

The disaster has caused a feeling akin to consternation in Gloucestershire and the north of Ireland, where the captured regiments were recruited, the blackest gloom prevails, families awaiting with beating hearts the names of the killed and wounded, which are fully expected to reach a high figure. Many homes are already in mourning in consequence of losses sustained by these regiments in previous engagements.

Public anxiety was increased by a special dispatch from Ladysmith, published in the late editions of the London afternoon papers to the effect that before darkness Monday the Boers reoccupied the old position held by their heavy artillery which Gen. White had reported silenced by the guns of the naval brigade from the Powerful and had opened fire again. The dispatch further says:

"The enemy are again closing in and the situation is one of grave anxiety. Beyond doubt the Boer retirement Monday was a ruse to draw Gen. White into the hilly country and away from the British camp."

This last sentence is significant and confirms the opinion of military experts that Gen. White is allowing himself to be outgenerated by Commandant Gen. Joubert.

From the scanty advices received up to 11 o'clock p. m. it seems tolerably certain that the disaster was a simple repetition of the battle of Majuba hill, though on a larger scale. The two regiments were allowed to march into a trap set for them. It is simply a case of Boer spider and British fly. In fact, the whole engagement of Monday seems to have been brought on by Commandant Gen. Joubert, who skillfully conceived a gigantic trap, out of which, as the official dispatch shows, Sir George White only escaped with difficulty.

Gen. White advanced with the idea of driving the Boers from the hill, seven miles out, which Gen. Joubert made an ostentatious show of fortifying on Sunday.

The Boer commander left a force sufficient to draw Gen. White on while the mass of the Boers he moved stealthily round the British right to deliver a flank attack and to endeavor to cut off Gen. White from Ladysmith. The British commander succeeded in beating off the attack, but only with great difficulty, and during the turning movements his troops suffered from a flanking fire.

Harsh things are said in military circles of the British tactics, which have made possible the ambush of the 18th Hussars at Glencoe and now the loss of two fine regiments.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—The breakdown of the Delagoa cable route, combined with the monopolization of the available telegraph lines by the government and British staff officers, is responsible for the fact that nothing further has arrived from South Africa.

An unconfirmed statement is published that Gen. Sir Redvers Buller has left Cape Town for Ladysmith.

The queen is credited with expressing sincere pity for Sir George Stewart White, and the officials are in nowise inclined to judge him harshly. So far as the public is concerned, however, while gratification is felt at the manner in which the isolated battalions surrendered, there is still severe criticism for Gen. White and Lieut. Col. Carleton for allowing the column to get out of touch, for the absence of proper scouting and for not retiring when the ammunition was lost. In favor of Lieut. Col. Carleton, the explanation is hazarded that he believed it was imperative to the success of Gen. White's operations that he should hold the position at Nicholson's Nek.

Loving Cup to Follow.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Sir Thomas Lipton sailed Wednesday for his home in England. He received a surprising tribute of the esteem in which he is held by a great many people, in a kind of triumphal march through several downtown streets, a great reception at the American line pier, where he went on board the St. Louis, and a series of informal receptions from thousands of people. He also received word of the presentation of the loving cup, which will be ready and will be forwarded to him by Christmas.

MINDANAO ISLAND.

The Tagalos Chiefs Have Made Overtures to Gen. Otis—They Offer to Submit to Our Authority.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Mail advices to the war department indicate important negotiations in the Mohammedan section of the archipelago, outside the much discussed territory of Sulu. Through the efforts of Mr. K. Engelskjöld, a gentleman of Norwegian birth who enjoys the confidence of the Tagalo chiefs in Mindanao, overtures of peace have been made to Gen. Otis at Manila. Mindanao is almost equal in area to Luzon, being one of the two great islands of the Philippines. The Mohammedans there number 150,000. Spain has maintained little more than nominal sovereignty. Thirty of these chiefs held a conference with Mr. Engelskjöld at Zamboanga and drew up a form of treaty proposing terms of peace. They have suffered greatly from the inroads of the Moros and offer to submit to the authority of the United States on the sole condition that sufficient American garrisons be established in the island to protect them.

These proposals were submitted to Gen. Otis on the arrival of Mr. Engelskjöld, but what action has been taken is not yet known. An escaped Spanish prisoner from the insurgent lines north of Manila has arrived at Angeles. He confirms the report that the insurgents are running short of Mauser ammunition and are unable to refill cartridge of this class. He says, however, that they are well supplied with Remington ammunition which they manufacture for themselves. They also manufacture dynamite and powder from petroleum and salt, which is shipped to them from Manila and taken into their lines at night. Of the 14 American prisoners held by the insurgents at Tarlac, the rebels claim that four have accepted commissions in the insurgent army.

Two Scotchmen named McKinley and MacIntosh have escaped from the rebels. They say that the insurgents claim to have 250 American prisoners scattered throughout various towns, but they knew of none personally excepting Lieut. Gilmore and his 14 sailors. The insurgents say, however, that they have two American officers in confinement besides Lieut. Gilmore.

Col. Smith, at Angeles, has sent to Gen. MacArthur a placard in Spanish which was found nailed to a tree outside the line. It was an appeal to the colored troops to join the insurgents in the fight for freedom, and referred to "Your brothers, Sam Hose and Gray, whose blood calls aloud for vengeance."

HOBART HAS A RELAPSE.

The Vice President of the United States is Critically Ill—Heart and Stomach Trouble the Cause.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Vice President Hobart, who has been ill for weeks at his home in Paterson, N. J., suffered a relapse Monday morning. He had a succession of choking spells, resulting from an imperfect action of the heart, an old affliction, complicated with inflammation of the stomach.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—A bulletin issued at 9 a. m. Wednesday from the residence of Vice President Hobart at Paterson, says: "Mr. Hobart passed a comfortable night; slept fairly well; no change in his condition from yesterday."

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 2.—Vice President Hobart's wonderful vitality stood him in good stead Wednesday, and notwithstanding he took little nourishment, he was unusually bright Wednesday evening, and asked Mrs. Hobart to read him the newspapers.

On Trial for Triple Murder.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 2.—Levi Moore, a fishmonger in the city market, who last May shot and killed Jennie Campbell, Ella Landis and Anna Mish, was placed on trial in the criminal court here Wednesday. Moore killed the Campbell woman because she had jilted him, and shot the other two because he thought they were trying to interfere. All three were married women. Moore's wife, who had left him and at the time was living in Alabama with her children, is here, and will be one of the witnesses.

Christian Socialists.

CUMBERLAND, Wis., Nov. 2.—A colony of 100 Germans, who call themselves Christian socialists, have purchased 4,000 acres of land on the Chippewa Falls and Northern branch of the Omaha railroad, northeast of this city, and have established a station called Soronau. They are building large houses and barns, and will work their land on the co-operative socialistic plan. They are a religious sect who came from the north of Germany.

Napoleon's Prophecy.

BERLIN, Nov. 2.—Several of the papers, commenting on the British defeat at Ladysmith, say that Napoleon's prophecy that South Africa will be the grave of England's empire, has a chance of being fulfilled.

The First Snow at Milwaukee.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 2.—The first snow of the season for this city fell Wednesday night. Twenty-five vessels sought shelter inside the government pier Wednesday, and only the regular line boats made their scheduled trips.

GEN. WOOD'S REPORT.

He Recommends a Large Reduction in the United States Troops in the Santiago Department, Cuba.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—The war department Wednesday made public the report of Brig. Gen. Leonard Wood, commanding the department of Santiago, Cuba, which is in addition to what has already been made public from this office.

Gen. Wood gives an interesting account of the sanitary reforms put in force and the good effect in reducing the extent of yellow fever, smallpox and other disease. In discussing present conditions he says: "I believe that the best and most trustworthy element of the population is entirely friendly and in thorough accord with the military authorities. The only element causing friction is the unscrupulous political element, composed of certain unprincipled agitators."

In view of this friendly attitude of the population Gen. Wood recommends a large reduction in the United States troops in the Santiago department. His recommendation in this respect is as follows:

"The people being extremely friendly and quiet, the garrison may safely be reduced to the lowest point consistent with efficiency. This, I think, will be accomplished by having in the province two squadrons of cavalry and two battalions of infantry. In other words, I recommend the withdrawal in the near future of one squadron of the 10th United States cavalry and one battalion of the 5th United States infantry, these to be sent to the United States as home or depot battalions of the regiments serving in this department."

Gen. Wood urges that the younger officers be chosen for subordinate commands in Cuba.

PUBLIC DEBT STATEMENT.

There Was a Decrease During the Month of October of $2,276,199—Total Debt $1,146,629,581.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—The monthly statement of the public debt issued Wednesday shows that at the close of business October 31, 1899, the debt, less cash in the treasury, amounted to $1,146,629,581, a decrease during the month of $2,276,199. This decrease is accounted for by the increase in the amount of cash on hand and the increased redemption of national bank notes. The debt recapitulated as follows:

Interest bearing debt, $1,046,049,020; debt on which interest has ceased since maturity, $1,210,030; debt bearing no interest, $888,792,071; total, $1,436,021,121.

This amount, however, does not include $656,064,903 in certificates and treasury notes outstanding which are offset by an equal amount of cash on hand. The cash in the treasury is classified as follows: Gold, $879,817,315; silver, $496,409,278; paper, $64,882,003; bonds, deposits in national bank depositories, disbursing officers' balance, etc., $82,957,222. Total, $1,025,153,849; against which there are demand liabilities outstanding amounting to $735,764,509, which leaves a net cash balance in the treasury of $289,391,540.

THE CIVIL SERVICE.

Annual Report of Chief Examiner Serven—Several Important Changes Will Be Made for Next Year.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Chief Examiner Serven, in his annual report made public Wednesday says 48,503 persons were examined for entrance to the government service. Not quite 75 per cent. of the candidates passed. The commission has decided to abolish the internal revenue boards of examiners, and examinations formerly conducted by them will be hereafter conducted by examiners sent from Washington. Owing to the increased demand for special tests the ordinary examinations for custom house and internal revenue branches and for first-class post offices will be held hereafter only once a year.

It is pointed out that out of a total of 4,414 appointments to the departmental and government printing services, 734 were women, and that of the 24,213 women who have passed examinations during the last ten years, 3,473, or over 14 per cent., have been appointed. The report recommends the establishment by the commission of a standard of general intelligence which could be considered as a preliminary test.

Portugal May Send Troops.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—The Portuguese government, according to a dispatch from Oporto to the Daily Mail has decided to send no troops to Delagoa bay before the end of December unless the frontier of Portuguese East Africa should be threatened.

Only One Life Saved.

THE AMERICAN ARMY.

Military Forces Now in the Service of the United States Regular Army, 64,586; Volunteers, 34,574; Total, 99,160.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—The annual report of the adjutant general of the army, Brig. Gen. Corbin, to the secretary of war, was made public Wednesday. Aside from the strictly technical recital of all the details of a busy year in military life, the report gives much information of an interesting general character and submits numerous recommendations for the betterment of the service.

Gen. Corbin sums up the military forces now in the service of the United States army as follows:

Regular army 64,586; volunteers 34,574; total, 99,160. The regular establishment consists of ten regiments of cavalry, seven of artillery and 25 of infantry. The volunteer establishment consists of one regiment of cavalry, 24 of infantry and a Porto Rico battalion.

The distribution of these troops up to October 1 last, was as follows:

In the United States, 34,229; Porto Rico, 3,393; Cuba, 11,187; Philippines, 32,315; en route to the Philippines, 17,099; Alaska, 499; Hawaiian Islands, 466. Gen. Corbin adds the following to the summary:

"It is expected that by December 1 next all the infantry regiments, United States volunteers, shown above as in the United States, will have sailed for the Philippine Islands. These, with the troops now there, will give a total strength of 2,117 officers and 63,608 enlisted men, an aggregate of 65,725."

Gen. Corbin pays a tribute to the officers of the new colored regiments drawn from the non-commissioned officers of the colored regiments in the regular army, or from those who saw service in the war with Spain, and says it is believed the best equipped men of our colored citizens have been commissioned.

"The pay of all officers below the grade of brigadier general should be increased at least 33 1/3 per cent. while on duty in Cuba or our new possessions. Most of these gentlemen have families that they are unable to have with them, and therefore are compelled to maintain two establishments. Also, that provision be made that all officers below the grade of major general who retire by reason of age or wounds received in action, shall do so on the next grade above the rank held by them in the regular army on the date of their retirement."

As the increase in the army calls for an additional number of military academy cadets to fill vacancies it is recommended that the president be authorized to appoint ten annually and that two be appointed at large from each state.

Satisfaction is expressed that the "army canteen" embarrassment has been removed from the war department by the action of congress in establishing certain restrictions.

The condition of the artillery service, especially of the seacoast, the report describes as not altogether satisfactory. It is believed that the time has arrived when the artillery branch of the service should be reorganized and the field artillery separated from that engaged in the coast defense. It is recommended that the regimental organization of the artillery be abolished and that a corps of field artillery and of seacoast artillery be provided for separate and distinct from each other.

In a resume Gen. Corbin says: "The regular army is now practically at a maximum, as are also the volunteer regiments. The work incident to all these changes, brought about by the acts aforesaid, involving the enlistment of 238,500 volunteers, the increase of the regular army from 96,000 to 62,000, its subsequent reduction and then again its increase to 65,000, necessitating numerous orders and instructions bearing on the same, to say nothing of the complete military record of every officer and man of this large force, threw upon this office work the magnitude of which can not be understood until undertaken. That this work has been done with accuracy and intelligence is now history. All credit is due to the assistants and the clerical force of the office."

The report also calls attention to the fact that not a single life has been lost by accident incident to travel in the course of all transportation to the Philippines.

Woman and Two Children Burned to Death.

JOPLIN, Mo., Nov. 2.—News has reached here that Mrs. Pilligree and two children have been burned to death near Tiff, McDonald county. It seems that the baby fell into a cauldron of hot apple butter and that the mother and another child was fatally burned trying to rescue it. The baby was dead when taken out and the other two members of the family died soon after.

New Bank at Barborton.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Controller Daves Wednesday authorized the First national bank of Barborton, O., to begin business, with a capital stock of $50,000. The officers are: President, Ed M. Buel; cashier, Frederick Keifer.

Fire in Toledo, O.

TOLEDO, O., Nov. 2.—Fire broke out in the mammoth works of the Lion coffee plant Wednesday night and caused a loss of perhaps $7,500 before it could be extinguished.

DESTRUCTIVE WINDS.

Many Houses at Wrightsville and Carolina Beach Destroyed, Entailing Loss of Many Thousands of Dollars.

WILMINGTON, N. C., Nov. 1.—Authoritative reports from Wrightsville and Carolina Beach says the northeaster which prevailed all of Monday, reached the height of its fury in that vicinity at 4 o'clock Tuesday morning. Much property was destroyed but no loss of life has been reported. At Wrightsville there are 60 odd cottages and of this number 15 are a total loss and the others badly damaged. The loss is estimated at from $20,000 to $25,000. The trestle of the Wilmington Seacoast railroad and track aggregating in extent about three miles, is a wreck and the damage is estimated at from $10,000 to $50,000.

At Wrightsville sound, on the mainland, one mile this side of the beach, considerable damage was done, and this loss is estimated at several thousand. The two large summer hotels on the beach were not destroyed, but were damaged to some extent.

At Carolina beach, near the mouth of the river, there are about 25 cottages, boat and club houses, and also a large hotel. About 18 of these were totally destroyed, and the remaining ones were badly damaged. This loss is placed at from $12,000 to $15,000. Both beaches were forunately deserted on account of the season.

A special to the Wilmington Star from Southport says that there was considerable damage along the water front there by the storm, but no loss of life is reported. A small passenger steamer and a tug were beached. No other news or reports of damage to shipping has reached here.

The Clyde steamer New York, Capt. Ingram, arrived from New York Tuesday afternoon. She encountered the storm off Frying Pan lightship, but rode it out with only slight damage to her cargo of general merchandise.

The damage in this city along the wharves by reason of the high tide Tuesday morning will be quite heavy. The maximum velocity of the wind here was about 60 miles an hour.

At the beaches and at Southport, the velocity was estimated at from 75 to 90 miles per hour.

SPAIN CLAIMS ISLANDS.

The Philippine Commission Says They Are Not Worth Negotiating For, as They Are of No Material Benefit.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—The islands in the Philippine group referred to in the Madrid dispatch as not having been included in the treaty ceding the archipelago to the United States are not regarded by the members of the Philippine commission as of any importance, and no regret, they say, need be felt if the statement should prove correct. The opinion was expressed by one of the commissioners Tuesday night that the islands referred to are not worth negotiating for, as they would not be of any material benefit. They are not thickly populated, and their commerce is small, as the islands are out of the way of the regular ocean travel. The terms of the peace treaty placed the northern boundary of the limit of cession along or near the 20th parallel of north latitude. The islands of the Batanes group are north of latitude 20, and if the parallel should be strictly adhered to they would not fall within the scope of the treaty. A careful study of the maps prepared in Manila for the use of the commissioners fail to disclose the Catalian islands. The suggestion is made that the territory meant is the Calayan islands, belonging to the Babuyan group, which, lying south of the 20th parallel, come within the scope of the treaty.

THE BATTLE SHIP KENTUCKY.

She Was Taken Out on Her Builder's Trial Trip Tuesday—The Sea Was Heavy and the Wind High.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Nov. 1.—The first-class battleship Kentucky went out on her builders trial trip Tuesday morning. The sea was heavy and the wind high. These conditions prevailed all day preventing any attempt at record running. Under forced draught and in a wind blowing 30 miles an hour, the Kentucky attained a speed of 16 1/4 knots or one-third knot more than required by contract. The Kentucky returned and anchored off Old Point at 6 p. m., the high wind rendering it unwise to attempt to enter the river Tuesday night.

Too Late.

A horseman burst into the prison yard. "Reprieved!" he shouted, and waved a paper aloft.

"Too late," replied the warden, sadly. "Is the man hanged already?" "No; but he has eaten the hearty breakfast of ham and eggs, coffee and potatoes!" Executive clemency was not sufficient in its place, but it could not be allowed to interfere with the conventional course of events. Yes, the horseman's steed was undeniably foaming, but even that availed little or nothing under the circumstances.—Detroit Journal.

"I feel it my duty to write and let you know what your medicine, '5 Drops,' has done for me. I have had rheumatism about 18 years, but was able to be up most of the time, until a year ago last May, when I was taken down and not able to move about. About six weeks ago I saw your advertisement and wrote for a sample bottle. After taking a few doses, it did me so much good that I ordered some more for myself and friends and in every case it has done wonders and given perfect satisfaction. Dr. Woodliff, my family physician, who has had rheumatism 15 years, is taking '5 Drops,' and says it is the most efficient rheumatic medicine he has ever used. May 31, 1899."

Thoroughbred.

A New York society dame, who is an ardent upholder of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, owns a little fox terrier of which she is exceedingly fond. A man who called on her the other day was admiring the dog and asked her mistress how she, with all her humane theories, could have allowed the cruel dog fancier to cut off Snap's tail and ears to the fashionable degree of brevity. The dame drew herself up and replied, with some hauteur: "My dear sir, Snap expected it. Every thoroughbred fox terrier expects to have his tail and ears shortened." And that humbled man went away saying to himself: "That's the first time I ever thought of 'noblesse oblige,' as applying to fox terriers."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

SOWING.

Sow thou thy seed of corn and wait awhile.
See the snow falling and the ice-spray gleam
Above its hiding-place. Hear the wind scream
And the wild tempest sweep o'er mile and mile
Of sunken landscape. Watch the rain-cloud's veil
Empty above it, and the fitful beam
Of sunlight thwart the fell, until a seam
Of tender green shoot up to greet thy smile.
And lo! God's miracle is wrought once more
Of life from death—from loss, most wondrous gain:
The cornfield glitters with its golden store
On the same land where late the storm and rain
Beat on the bare, brown earth. Thy sowing o'er,
Thine but to wait and pray lest faith—
—should wane!

Sow thou thy seed of love, O heart, and wait
Though it lie hidden—though thy doubts and fears
Whisper to thee 'tis lost, and thy sad tears
Fall on the ice-bound soil of bitter fate—
Surely the seed will live: Spring sets the gate
Of life wide open. See! though hid for years,
Love seeks the light of love—its tender spear
Shall gladden thy sad eyes at last, though late:
E'en but the blade perchance and not the bloom.
Ofttimes God seeth that Love's flower rare
Hath no perfection this side of the tomb,
But needeth for its growth the purer air
Of his sweet Paradise; after earth's gloom
Love hath its blossoming—not here, but there!

A few moments sufficed to dress the cut properly, and after turning over the knife and revolver to the authorities, to aid in identifying the two robbers, Tom was about to start for his hotel when his new acquaintance said, bluntly:

"Hold on a minute. I'd like to know the name of the man who stood by an old chap to-night and saved my life. How did you happen along so handy like?"

"My name is Tom Scott, and I happened to hear those men planning to rob somebody, so I kept an eye on them. That's all."

"No, it ain't all, by a long chalk," was the hearty response. "You did more'n that, and I might be chucked into the dock before this only for your pluck. My name is John Avery, and I'm pretty well known along the waterfront as a man of my word. If I can ever do you a good turn you can count on me. Live here in the city?"

"No, I'm just from New Hampshire," said Tom.

"Looking for work?"

"No, I'm trying to find a chance to get to the Klondike."

"Then, by thunder, you needn't look any longer," was the prompt reply, "because I'm bound there myself, and you shall go with me if you want to. I wouldn't ask a better mate than you. Where are you stopping?"

Tom mentioned the name of his hotel and the other said at once:

"All right. Let's go there and talk this thing over."

Half an hour later they were seated in the smoking room and Tom's modest story was told. When he had finished his friend said:

"That's a good, straight yarn, and some day I may have one to tell you that will open your eyes. All I need to say now is that my name is John Avery. I'm an old 49-er without wife or child, and I'm bound for the Klondike to get my pile. It's waiting for me there, all right. I've taken passage on a sailing vessel because I like the water and hate the cars. Besides, there is no use getting there before spring. I will pay your passage out on the same vessel, and you can keep your little pile. If the Yukon camps are anything like the old days in California, you'll need it all and more, too. We'll call it a loan or anything you like, and you can pay me when you strike a rich claim."

Tom protested faintly, but he was overwhelmed at the prospect, and soon yielded.

"We'll see about getting your passage the first thing in the morning," said Avery, "and now, as my old head is giving me particular fits, I guess I'll get a bed here and turn in. I was calculating to sleep on board to-night, but I'll wait for daylight before I try that again."

Then, pressing Tom's hand warmly, the old miner said:

"Good night, mate. You oughter sleep well after saving a man's life, and money, too. Do you know I have $5,000 in my clothes, and but for you it wouldn't be there now."

There was a suspicious moisture in his eyes, as he turned hastily and left the room, leaving Tom to his pleasant thoughts.

He could hardly realize all that had been crowded into the few hours since his arrival, and his sleep was broken by fitful dreams, in which robbers and robbers played prominent roles.

CHAPTER II.

TOM MEETS AN OLD ENEMY.

When Tom Scott awoke the following morning his side was stiff and sore, but by the time he had dressed and made his way downstairs he had almost forgotten the wound in the realization of the fact that the way had been miraculously opened for him to reach the gold region.

He found the old miner waiting for him in the smoking-room, and as he entered the latter arose and greeted him heartily, saying:

"Good morning, Scott. How is the side to-day? Pretty sore, isn't it? My headpiece is rather tender, too, from the clip I got, but they'll both have time to heal before the voyage is over. Come on, let's get a good square meal and then we'll go down to the vessel. I hope she'll be ready to sail to-day. All my stuff's been on board for a week now. You'll want a few duds, too, I dare say, for the trip."

After a hearty meal the two men proceeded to the wharf, and as they reached the scene of the previous night's struggle the elder man said, quietly:

"I'll never forget this place as long as I live. If those rascals had only dreamed what I carried with me they'd have finished their bloody work and I'd have been down there."

As he spoke he pointed significantly toward the icy water in the dock and then added:

"The money was nothing, but—"

He broke off suddenly and led the way in silence until they reached the vessel, where the captain, a grizzled old salt, was pacing the deck and urging the stevedores to greater efforts.

The Seabird was a trim built craft of about 600 tons. The cook was flying about the deck in his white apron, the second mate was hard at work below, and as the two men stepped on board the captain said, cheerily:

"Good morning, Mr. Avery. We're about ready, you see. The wind is fair, and if nothing happens we'll be under way by dinner time. The mate has gone back on me and I've sent after another man."

In a few words the miner informed the old seadog of his adventure the preceding evening, adding:

"This is Mr. Thomas Scott, who saved my life. If it hadn't been for him you'd have sailed without me, and now you've got to take him too. He'll pay the same as I do, and share my stateroom. Is it a bargain?"

"He's welcome," was the curt reply, "as long as he's to bunk in with you. I've no other spare berth."

"Good," exclaimed Avery. "Come on, Scott. We'll have to hurry up and get your stuff."

Tom's companion was an old traveler, and knew exactly what was required for the voyage, as well as where to obtain it, and when the tug came alongside at noon our hero had a well-filled chest of clothing below, and stood on deck watching the operation of getting under way.

"Make that hawser fast lively!" shouted a harsh voice near him, and Tom turned to see a short, thickest man, bustling about and cursing the sailors roundly. His face was turned away, but there was something familiar in his bearing, and Tom was wondering at this when Capt. Coffin shouted:

"Let the men get their dinner while we are towing down, Mr. Rider."

"Aye, aye, sir."

Tom started as if he had been shot. He saw the mate turn towards the poop deck as he replied and there was no mistaking his features. The red face, bushy beard and brutal mouth could belong to none other than Tom's old enemy, Obed Rider, who had brought the story of Capt. Scott's flight to Merivale. If any further proof was needed, his broken nose, which added to the repulsiveness of his appearance, was noticeable at the first glance.

As he caught sight of Tom he stopped as if rooted to the deck and uttered an exclamation of amazement, for the recognition was mutual. Then an evil light blazed in his eyes and he bounded towards Tom, hissing through his set teeth:

"How came you aboard this craft?"

His fists were clenched, but he paused before reaching striking distance, for four years had developed Tom Scott from a lanky boy into a tall, muscular man, and the same undaunted spirit now looked boldly into the other's eyes.

The captain and the old miner were both below at the moment, the former having gone to his dinner, after giving his last order, and the chief officer stood glaring at Tom like an enraged animal. He had been shipped at the last moment and had no knowledge of any passengers on board, supposing Tom must have been engaged as a common sailor.

"What are you doing on that quarter deck?" he demanded, as Tom made no reply to his first question. "What's the matter with you? Open your mouth or I'll open it for you! What are you doing here?"

"None of your business," replied Tom, finding his tongue at last.

"I'll make it my business, damned quick!" cried the infuriated officer, his eyes snapping as he thought of the long voyage ahead and his power to take his revenge tenfold on one under his authority.

"Get forward where you belong," he shouted.

Tom understood now what was passing in the other's mind, but determined not to deceive the mate in order that the truth might be all the more crushing when made known.

"I won't stir a peg for you, Obed Rider," he replied, "and if you are not careful I will make your face look worse than I did when I was a boy. What bad luck brought you here I don't know, but I warn you to keep clear from me!"

The expression on the mate's face was fairly fiendish as he snatched an iron belaying pin from the life rail and rushed at Tom, crying:

"You won't stir, eh! Curse you, I'll show you the difference between afloat and ashore!"

But his blow was arrested in mid air by an iron grip about his wrist and the weapon was torn from his hand instantly. He found himself pressed against the mizenmast with a force that nearly took his breath away, while Tom said, sternly:

"Don't try that with me again or I'll ditch you overboard!"

As he spoke he released the mate, who sprang for the cabin steps, his face crimson with passion, shouting:

"Mutiny! Mutiny! I'll have your life for this!"

He had reached the head of the steps when Capt. Coffin appeared on the scene, attracted by the mate's loud tones.

"What's the trouble here?" he demanded, as the officer tried to push by him on the steps.

"It's mutiny, sir!" was the angry reply. "Wait till I get my pistol, and I'll soon settle it!"

The captain looked about him in surprise. Tom stood alone on the quarter deck, and the whole matter was inexplicable unless the new mate was crazy, a thought which found ample justification in his disordered appearance.

"Mutiny?" he repeated, contemptuously. "See here, if you've been drinking, Mr. Rider, don't let it happen again. I can make allowance for sailing day, but see it doesn't happen again!"

"I am as sober as you are," was the surly reply. "That man there! That Scott whelp! He refused to obey me, and I'll see whether I am mate of this ship or not!"

With one stride the captain reached his side and thrust his weather-beaten face close to the mate's, giving him a look before which the other quailed.

"Look you!" he said, sharply. "When you speak to me remember I have a handle to my name, and see you put it on every time! You must be drunk!"

The mate looked from one to the other as if he could not believe his own senses. What did it all mean? Why did the skipper refuse to side with him and allow Tom to stand there unmolested after assaulting his superior officer?

Seeing he could do nothing but glare at Tom the skipper turned to the latter and said, coolly:

"It's next to impossible to get a sober man nowadays. The best seamen all seem to make it a business to keep drunk all the time they are ashore. After they get out to sea they are all right."

"Capt. Coffin," said the mate, stepping forward, "I have not touched a drop of liquor to-day. I ordered this man to go forward and he resisted me."

"Ordered him forward! Well, that's a good one!" And the captain broke into a hoarse chuckle. "Why, bless me, but of course you didn't know! Mr. Scott is a passenger on the Seabird and is going to Frisco with us. There's another down below, a Mr. Avery. Make you acquainted with Mr. Scott. Mr. Scott, this is my mate, Mr. Rider. It's all my fault not telling him you was aboard. Kinder funny, wasn't it?"

"We don't need any introduction," said Tom, quickly. "I have known Obed Rider a long time. I don't know any good of him, either."

Capt. Coffin was surprised, but he asked no questions, preferring to wait

"I'll show you the difference between afloat and ashore."

until he could see Tom alone. The mate bit his lip in baffled rage as he saw his prey not only removed from his power, but placed in a position where he must be treated with outward respect at least. He turned on his heel and went forward, vowing vengeance under his breath, but not daring to show his feeling further before the captain.

"So you know my mate?" then asked the captain.

"I knew him years ago," replied Tom, "and we had some trouble. It doesn't matter what it was about, but his nose got broken, and he hates me as hard as I do him. He may be a good sailor, however, and no doubt he is. He used to sail with my father."

A hail from the tug saved Tom any further explanation, and as the captain bustled off to reply Avery came out of the cabin and joined his roommate, who told him briefly about the recent trouble, making no mention of the original cause of the enmity between himself and Rider, for the charge against his father was too sore a subject to pass his lips.

By the time dinner was over the vessel was well down the harbor. When Boston light was reached the westerly wind began to freshen, and the sails stood full. Lines were hastily cast off, the tug's whistle gave a short blast as a parting salute, and with a graceful nod of her sharp bow in return, the bark shot toward the open water, with every square inch of canvas pulling at the sheets, and the captain rubbing his horny palms with delight at the prospect of a fine departure.

John Avery was an old sailor, and the motion of the vessel caused him no inconvenience, but Tom was soon stretched in his bunk, where he remained the better part of two days, while the Seabird flew along before the favorable gale in a manner which did not belie her name.

When he managed to get on deck Cape Cod was more than 300 miles astern, and already the weather was beginning to grow milder. A few days more made him completely well, and long before the equator was reached he had acquired quite a professional roll and felt perfectly at home.

Of the mate he saw very little, as the latter stood watch and watch with the second officer, being on deck every other four hours, night and day. Mr. Green, the second mate, was a bright, active young man about Tom's age, and the two became very friendly as the Seabird sped steadily to the southward.

It seemed as if old Neptune had made an extra effort to help the vessel along, for she escaped the customary calms near the line and caught the southeast trades the same day she lost those from the northeast which had served her so well. No incident of importance occurred to break the monotony of the voyage, and as they stood by the wheel one noon when Capt. Coffin was taking his observation he announced that they were as far south of the line as Boston was north of it.

Then he went below to look at the glass, cast a careful glance around the horizon, and went below once more, only to reappear on deck.

"There ain't a cloud in the sky," he said, bluntly, "but the glass is going down as though the bottom had dropped out of everything. We're going to catch it, as sure as my name is Seth Coffin. My glass never lied to me yet."

Gradually the wind died out, until the Seabird lay becalmed, rising and falling on the swell, but the sky remained clear. The barometer continued to fall in an alarming manner, and after an hour the heat became oppressive.

Then from all quarters of the horizon a mass of white clouds arose, until they presented the appearance of huge mountains of snow, darkening as they ascended, and massing together until they formed a canopy overhead, entirely concealing the blue sky above. Soon they deepened until the whole heavens were solidly black, as if covered with folds of velvet. In a few places, however, the color seemed to vary to a dark, purplish gray, as one edge of an overlapping cloud was exposed.

Long before this time all hands were on deck, and the Seabird was stripped for the battle with the elements. Whatever his other faults, Obed Rider was a good seaman, and, with but few suggestions from the captain, he had made everything snug, only a close-reefed maintop and storm staysail showing aft, while a portion of the foretopmast staysail stood out white and clear against the gloomy background, in readiness to pay her head off when needed.

There was a painful stillness, broken only by the mournful monotone in the rigging which always precedes a hurricane, as though the craft knew her danger and tried to utter her feeble protest against the forces of nature.

Suddenly, far above the mastsheads, sounded an unearthly scream, as if the storm demons had united in sounding the charge. Still the sails hung idly, and not a breath of air could be felt.

Then in the far distance a long, bright streak suddenly illuminated the horizon, increasing with marvelous rapidity until all could see what seemed to be an endless line of rolling snow. It was impossible to bring the vessel's head up to meet the danger without wind, and she lay helpless in its path, rolling uneasily about on the disturbed sea.

UNEXPECTED SUMMONS.

How an American in Cuba Unwittingly Called Out the Whole Army.

In one of the old stories of English folk-lore we are told that, in the caverns of Alderley Edge, a ridge of high land, are 999 horsemen ready to start into action should the right bugle blow. The author of "Cannon and Camera" had, in Cuba, his experience of a like assembling. With a party he was on his way, through mud and rain, to a spot where he expected to get a fine view of Santiago.

"We came to a river already much swollen from the shower, its stream rushing down in torrents from the hill-top. Through this we were obliged to wade up to our armpits, holding our cameras and plates above our heads."

"When we reached the dilapidated old fort we fell in with the outpost of the Cubans in front of San Juan. We were told that, two or three days previous to our arrival, the Spaniards had evacuated this fort very unceremoniously. This was the day after the battle with the rough riders, in which, being routed, they fell back on their main forces, about two miles in the rear."

"In this old fort was a bell tower, containing a finely carved bell. Something prompted me to go up into the tower and examine the bell. Once there, an impulse seized me to ring the bell, and I did it, with alarming effect; for out of hiding came every Cuban soldier for miles and miles, all wildly gesticulating."

"I realized immediately that this was the signal for assembling in mass should the enemy be seen to advance. I shall never forget that sight so long as I live. Of course I was admonished for doing it, but when I assured everybody that my intentions were honest forgiveness was accorded me."—Youth's Companion.

Musical Egotism.

A musician died, and his sleeping soul waited at the gate. Then said the angel: "Has this man sinned?" "Yes," answered the voices of the neighbors; "he has played his own works all day."

"What shall be his punishment?" asked the angel. "Let him hear those works forever," cried the voices. So the soul was awakened in hell by the chanting of its own music. "This must be Heaven," it said.—London Academy.

DEATH TO CHICAGO'S OAKS.

In a Decade Most of the Great Trees May Be Gone—Other Growths Supplant Them.

The oaks of Chicago and its suburbs are going the way of all things mortal. It is predicted by nurserymen that within a decade no heated city resident can find a place of rest under the generous shade of one of these trees within 40 miles of the city's heart.

For years the oak has been the characteristic tree of the lake shore section, but the knell of its doom seems to have been rung. It is probable that before long Oak Park must take on a new name if the villagers wish to have all things consistent. Civilization is the enemy of the gnarled oak, as it is the enemy of the squirrels that acorns in its branches.

On the South side, in Chicago, within view of the cars from the elevated railroad, there are square blocks on which no buildings have been erected and which look desolate, for within the last two years the oak trees around them have withered and died. Their trunks still tower and their branches spread, but of green leaves there is not left a vestige.

The nurserymen say: "Drainage has done this thing," and that wherever a drainage pipe runs the oak must perish.

Persons interested in the beautifying of their grounds, having foreseen the inevitable dying of the oaks, have been experimenting with other trees. The result is that though the oak—with all the associations which have clung to that tree in every land in which it grows—must go, there are other trees beautiful in themselves which will thrive in the place which the old forest giant has left vacant.

The head gardener at Lincoln park has given some hints as to the comparative hardihood of trees and the kind of soil to which each tree is adapted. The cause of the death of the oaks, he says, is the drainage of the soil, the oak having a tap root which takes up a great share of the moisture necessary for the tree. The elm, on the other hand, has a spreading root and does not require anything like the amount of moisture needed by the oak. Elms are thriving all through the suburbs and in many places in the heart of the city itself.

The soft maple and the catalpa are coming to be characteristic trees of the North side. The catalpa does especially well along the lake shore. Some of these trees, planted nearly 20 years ago, show not a single dead twig. Perhaps the catalpa's only drawback is the fact that the leaves drop early. The soft maple will live and thrive if care be taken of it. Wood boring insects like it, and the branches break easily.

The cottonwoods and some varieties of the poplar will thrive without more than a medium of care. The balsam poplar, however, is apt to become the prey of insects, while the Lombardy poplar, which points like a lance to the sky, is apt to be short-lived amid the surroundings of civilization.

Many experiments have been made in Chicago in the last ten years with the iolanthus, or Tree of Heaven. It is a beautiful shade tree and an exceedingly rapid grower, and insects seem to avoid it. It needs, however, some degree of shelter in severe winters, though several of these trees in Lincoln park stood the extreme cold of last year without injury. The iolanthus in three years' growth is of sufficient size to shade a porch.

Gardeners say it is useless for city residents to plant pines or spruces. Smoke kills them. A Norway maple will do well under almost any conditions, as will the Caroline poplar and some other varieties of trees.—Chicago Tribune.

WOMEN BUYING RIFLES.

Large Increase in the Number Who Go Hunting with Their Husbands.

Inquiries of some of the chief dealers in sporting guns show that their season's trade has been especially active this month. Shotguns are briskly sold, but there is a very lively demand for sporting rifles, for which women customers are partly responsible.

"You would be surprised," said the head of one large establishment, "to know how the number of women who go shooting with their husbands or brothers has increased in the last six or eight weeks. No, I don't think the change is wholly due to the athletic woman. It seems to me that most of the women who go in for shooting do so because, when the husband goes off on a shooting trip, he wants to take his wife with him and let her have a share in the fun."

"The women come in here with their menfolk sometimes, and they pick up a gun with no more idea how to hold it than if it was a lasso. I don't think there has been more than one woman in this store who took up a gun as if she knew how to handle it. No, they are no more difficult customers than men. If a man isn't an expert himself, he goes to some friend who thinks he is an expert, and asks his advice. The man who has been shooting for several years thinks he knows it all, and that we don't know anything. So the new hand comes in here, full of infallible advice, and it's hard work to suit him. We've got everything, but he can't decide."

"The women know they don't know, and we can suit them quickly. We sell them a very light rifle, 30-caliber, with smokeless powder and long bullets, like those of the navy rifle."

"Yes; they say that they can shoot, and kill deer, too. But the way they handle guns here doesn't look much like it."—N. Y. Post.

Be Careful

No woman can be too careful of her condition during the period before her little ones are born. Neglect or improper treatment then endangers her life and that of the child. It lies with her whether she shall suffer unnecessarily, or whether the ordeal shall be made comparatively easy. She had better do nothing than do something wrong.

MOTHER'S FRIEND

is the one and the only preparation that is safe to use. It is a liniment that penetrates from the outside. External applications are eternally right. Internal medicines are radically wrong. They are more than humbugs—they endanger life.

Mother's Friend helps the muscles to relax and expand naturally—relieves morning sickness—removes the cause of nervousness and headache—prevents hard and rising breasts—shortens labor and lessens the pains—and helps the patient to rapid recovery.

From a letter by a Shreveport, La., woman: "I have been using your wonderful remedy, Mother's Friend, for the last two months, and find it just as recommended."

Scrofula to Consumption.

Any one predisposed to Scrofula can never be healthy and vigorous. This taint in the blood naturally drifts into Consumption. Being such a deep-seated blood disease, Swift's Specific is the only known cure for Scrofula, because it is the only remedy which can reach the disease.

Scrofula appeared on the head of my little grandchild when only 18 months old. Shortly after breaking out it spread rapidly all over her body. The sores on the sores would peel off on the slightest touch, and the odor that would arise made the atmosphere of the room sickening and unbearable.

The disease next attacked the eyes, and we feared she would lose her sight. Eminent physicians from the surrounding country were consulted, but could do nothing to relieve the little innocent, and gave it as their opinion that the case was hopeless and impossible to save the child's eyesight. It was then that we decided to try Swift's Specific. That medicine at once made a speedy and complete cure. She is now a young lady, and has never had a sign of the disease to return.

Mrs. RUTH BERKELEY, Salina, Kan.

Scrofula is an obstinate blood disease, and is beyond the reach of the average blood medicine. Swift's Specific is the only remedy equal to such deep-seated diseases; it goes down to the very foundation and forces out every taint. It is purely vegetable, and is the only blood remedy guaranteed to contain no mercury, potash or other mineral substance whatever. Books mailed free by Swift Specific Company, Atlanta, Georgia.

Mrs. Ashbrook's Candidacy.

As some of the Democratic voters of Bourbon seem to be laboring under a slight misapprehension regarding Mr. Allen M. Kiser's race (in my interest) for the office of Jailor, I take this method of addressing them. Mr. Jones, my former representative, resigned some time ago, and Mr. Kiser was appointed in his stead. The present race is to elect a Jailor to fill the unexpired term, which I feel is rightfully due me. I do not wish the office after my four year term is finished and will not be a candidate for it again. I believe that I deserve the election in my representative, Mr. Kiser to the unexpired term, and will be grateful to my friends for their support. Very respectfully,
MRS. RACHAEL ASHBROOK.

IN THE DAYS OF QUEEN ANNE.

If you were but living two hundred years back
You'd wear a brocade and a flowered silk
You'd powder your tresses and buckle your
And little black patches you freely would use;
You'd revel in satin and yards of gold lace,
And put a black mask on your dear little face—
You'd slumber and curtsy, and carry a fan,
If you had been born in the days of Queen Anne!

If I were to live at the time I record,
I'd wear a cocked hat and a gold-bitted sword—
My head would be covered with soldierly
And glory new-gained in the Marlborough wars;
And I'd sport a red coat, and I'd mount a
And quote the Spectator, and talk very big—
In short, I'd be wholly a different man
If I had been born in the days of Queen Anne.

And you would be stanch to the Jacobite cause,
And I should be meddling with newly-made laws—
But still I should whisper: "Let Strophon proclaim
In the ear of his Chloe his rapturous flame!"
And I'd clasp you so close, and I'd love you
And I'd kiss you as now at this moment I do—
For love is yet love, since the round world began,
And hearts have survived since the days of Queen Anne.

Turtles Went on Strike

They Were Pushed Beyond the Limit by a Mean Man.

SNAPPING turtles was always a sad with Si Evershed," said Deacon Ellis, reminiscently. "Train a turtle in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart therefrom," Si says to me the other day. "A man with brains and a couple of snapping turtles can supply the whole village with ducks without doing but mighty little work."

"Snapping turtles have their rights, as well as other people," I replied. "And it's a shame to be working them overtime, now that the nights are getting cold." But Si just laughed and said he wasn't afraid of his turtles going on a strike. They did, though, and that's why Si is mourning the loss of a toe and four valuable trained turtles.

"Ducks are plentiful in the lake and there is a big demand for them, but, owing to the amount they have been shot at, they have got mighty shy. This spring Si was gunning for ducks when he saw one light down and start feeding. Si was wondering whether to try a shot at him when the duck began to squawk and flop around and act as if something was holding it down."

"Danged queer," says Si, "that duck acts as if it was caught in a trap."

"So Si started over to find out what was causing the duck so much trouble. Sure enough, it had been caught in a trap, but not the kind Si thought. While Mr. Duck had been mooning around in the soft mud, looking for food, he had stepped on a snapping turtle, which was lying partly under the mud. Snapping turtles are not fond of being walked on, and this particular turtle just shot out his long neck, got a good grip on the duck, and hung on after the calm, impartial manner of snapping turtles."

"Si carried duck and snapping turtle back to his house, and, as there wasn't any way of making the turtle let go, he cut off the part where the turtle had fastened his grip on the unlucky duck. Now Si is the happiest, contentedest man in the world when he can get somewhat else to do his work, and he figured over the duck-and-turtle problem for quite awhile."

"Ducks are inquisitive by nature," he says to his wife, "always wanting to find out just what anything new is. Snapping turtles have no particular feeling against ducks, but they might be taught to have. Hamed if I don't think I've struck a great combination."

"So Si goes over to the creek and catches four young snapping turtles. Then he gets a stuffed duck and begins the work of training. He would take the duck and poke it right in the face of a turtle. Out would come the turtle's head, and he would make a snap at the duck. Then Si would pull the duck back, and with a little stick he had been holding back out of sight of the turtle he would give the turtle a whack on the back or hind legs. The turtle's attention being concentrated on the duck, he wouldn't blame Si for the blow with the stick, but would lay it all to the innocent stuffed duck. Snapping turtles ain't any too lovable by nature, and these young ones of Si's soon began to connect the appearance of a duck with a whack of a stick. Ducks just drew out all the evil in those snapping turtles' natures. The sight of a duck had the same effect on them that a red rag does on a bull. You could see their little eyes gleam, it made them so mad. But a snapping turtle knows that running ain't its main hold, and Si's turtles would just lay back with their heads under their shells, as innocent-looking as could be, until a stuffed duck was near enough for them to have a chance to grab it. Then they would shoot out their heads, and if they got a hold, heaven and earth wouldn't make them let go. They tore up a considerable number of ducks before Si got them trained, but Si didn't care."

"Don't you worry," he says to his wife. "The snapping turtle is an understimate animal. It will furnish the snapping qualities and I will supply the brain work, and the combination will make Pike county ducks weary."

"Si always fed the turtles and gave them fresh water and soft mud to lie in. The result was that, while these misguided turtles hated ducks worse and worse each day, they thought of the world of Si. They would scramble out of their mud whenever Si came into the pen he kept them in, and follow him about like a lot of unusually clumsy puppies. By and by Si thought he had his turtles trained all right, so he got ready to put his duck-catching plans into operation. First he made four little floats, like little rafts. Then he slipped a ring over a hind leg of every turtle and fastened a turtle on each float. Then he put some mud on the floats and scattered corn over the mud. When night came he set the floats floating out in the lake, each being fastened to the shore by a long cord."

"The nights being cold," said Si, "those intelligent turtles of mine are going to bury themselves in the mud. Ducks are curious and hungry at this time of year, and they will be sure to go nosing about those innocent looking floats with the corn on them. But when any intruding duck in picking up corn treads on one of these turtles something entirely new to ducks is going to be sprung on him all of a sudden."

"The next morning Si went around to look at his turtle-traps. Sure enough, each turtle was holding a duck. Si drew the floats to shore and was cutting the ducks loose, preparatory to wringing their necks, when along comes a game constable."

"See here," says the constable. "What do you mean by catching ducks out of season?"

"I ain't catching them," growled Si. "Anybody but a dang fool constable could see the turtles caught the ducks." "You mustn't let your turtles catch ducks," replies the constable, sort of doubtful.

"Si just grinned. 'I ain't a lawyer,' he says, sarcastic like, 'but I never heard of anything in the laws of the state of Pennsylvania making a closed season for snapping turtles. Them's the culprits,' he says, pointing to the four snapping turtles. 'Go explain the law to them. They've got more intelligence than some officers of the law who ain't so very far off at the present minute.' And he went on gathering in the captive ducks."

"The constable was madder than a hornet, but not knowing of any law applying to trained snapping turtles he went without saying a word. Si took his ducks to the village, and ducks being scarce, got a good price for them. Then the real nature of the man showed up."

"If these pet turtles of mine can gather in ducks at night, why can't they in the day?" he says to his wife. "They've been taking things easy all spring and summer. Let them do some work now to pay for the care I've lavished on them."

"So Si put the turtles out on the floats again that afternoon. He hid in the bushes alongside of the lake and after four more misguided ducks had got tangled up with the turtles, Si pulled in the floats. Instead of giving the faithful turtles a little rest from their labors, he shoved the floats out again."

"Those turtles are doing their duty faithfully," I said to him. "Don't work them to death. Even a snapping turtle has its rights, which ought not to be trampled on."

"But no, that didn't suit Si. He had a good thing and he was going to work it to death. All that night and all the next day Si kept the patient little animals at work gathering in ducks. There ain't an animal in the world that will stick to a job better than a snapping turtle, but when Si finally gathered up his ducks and started for home, it was plain those turtles were about worn out. They seemed puzzled, too. There they had been catching ducks for two days, nights and days, and not a duck did they have that they could call their own."

"Si is running this show, and it must be all right," they seemed to be saying to themselves, as they waddled home, "but it is blamed queer where all our ducks are."

"If Si had acted half-way decent about the matter he might have kept the love and trust of these turtles and accumulated ducks for himself all the year around. They weren't unreasonable turtles and they thought the world of Si. A duck here and there would have satisfied them, and Si could have had the rest. But when Si routed the turtles out early the next morning and started them off on the floats, anyone could see they were not feeling cheerful and satisfied."

"Be careful, Si," I says to him, "or you will lose the esteem of those turtles. A snapping turtle that feels his confidence has been misplaced is an ugly animal to deal with."

"But no. Si was after ducks and ducks he would have if he worked those turtles until they dropped. All day and all night he kept them on the floats, tearing the ducks away as soon as a turtle caught one. Then, after giving them only a couple of hours' rest, he tried to start them at work again. Then the strike began. Si tried to get the turtles to come out of their mud in the pen and start for the lake, although they were so tired their poor legs would hardly carry them. But he had reached the limit of snapping turtle good nature. Not a turtle would budge out of the mud, but when Si made a quacking noise like a duck, which was the signal for the turtles to start for the lake, each turtle tried to bury himself deeper in the mud. Then Si was mad."

"I'll teach these loafing turtles that while ducks are plentiful they've got to work. No tramp turtles are going to be allowed on the Evershed farm, dozing in the mud and neglecting their opportunities to make hay while ducks are plentiful." With that Si gave a stick and, having routed the turtles out of the mud, he began to pound them.

"Well, they were the most surprised turtles you ever saw. At the first blow of the stick each turtle stuck his head out from under his shell and looked around for a duck. They had been accustomed to connect blows with the stick and ducks. First, they poked their heads about in a wondering way. Then the turtles looked at Si as if asking him: 'Where are the ducks?' Si didn't appreciate the mix-up he was causing in the minds of those turtles, but kept on hitting them with the stick, and trying to persuade them to go to the lake and resume their labors at duck hunting."

"Don't tell me that turtles, and especially trained turtles like those of Si's, can't think. It was plain how those poor turtles felt. First it was just surprise at not seeing any ducks when they were hit with the stick. Then it was disappointment, a sort of reluctant loss of faith in human nature. Could it be that the poundings they had experienced from their youth up had been due to Si, the man they looked up to and revered, and not to the hated ducks? Why, it was just like telling a man that his whole religion is a lie. A turtle's mind doesn't work any too quickly, and these turtles were thrown all in a daze at being beaten by Si Evershed, the man who had fed them and whom they had trusted and loved. Finally the turtles gave it up in a despairing sort of way and waddled off toward the pond and their daily task. But it was plain they were doing some mighty hard thinking."

"When they got to the pond Si, being out of humor at the strike of the turtles, just tied them on their floats and tossed the floats out in the lake in a careless way, as if he didn't care whether his faithful turtles drowned or not. The floats turned up all right in the end, but not before the turtles had got good and wet. That added to the grievances of the turtles and helped turn them from respectable, hard working duck catchers into vagrant snapping turtles, ready to bite the hand which fed them."

"The ducks were getting cautious of those turtle floats, and it wasn't until nearly night that each turtle had caught a duck. The wit didn't improve Si's temper. When the floats were full Si hauled them in shore. Then he grabbed a duck and tried to yank it away from the turtle which was clinging to it. Of course, this only made the turtle hold on the harder."

"Pesky little varmint," says Si. "I'll teach you to hold on to my ducks." So, taking a stick, Si began to whack the turtle over the head.

"Patience isn't the main virtue of a snapping turtle, even of a trained one. And these turtles had a list of grievances which they had been brooding over all the time they had been on the floats. First, they had been worked overtime; then they had made the discovery that Si Evershed and not the ducks were responsible for the beatings they had suffered; they had been tossed out in the lake, as if no one cared whether they were drowned or not; and finally, after they had laid aside malice and each caught a duck, the oldest and best turtle had been pounded over the head with a stick. That settled the matter. Each turtle was determined he would do no more work for Si Evershed. It may take a trained snapping turtle quite awhile to decide what to do, but they are mighty quick to act when their minds are made up."

"Si was pounding the long-suffering turtle over the head when all of a sudden the turtle let go of the duck. The next second he had his jaws settled in Si's big toe. Si forgot all about the duck. For the next few seconds he was busy dancing about, swearing and trying to get his toe free from that once faithful but now exasperated turtle. Ordinarily a snapping turtle hangs on like death. But it was different with this turtle. He didn't so much want to have revenge on Si as to emphasize the fact that he hadn't been fairly treated. Pretty soon the turtle let go of Si's toe. Si dropped on the ground in a heap, holding on to his injured toe and cursing the ingratitude, as he called it, of the turtle."

"But while that particular turtle had been making things interesting for Si, the others had been busy in a way which showed they appreciated the strike was on. Each turtle helped bite off the cord by which another turtle was tied to a float. Then, when the turtle which had been pinching Si let go, the other turtles waddled over and set that turtle free. Each turtle could then go where he pleased. And each turtle made up his mind that his days of duck catching for Si Evershed were over then and there. By the time Si had a little recovered from the pain in his toe the four turtles had reached the edge of the lake. There they stopped for a second, turned around, took a last look at Si and then plunged in the lake. And that was the last ever seen of Si Evershed's duck catching snapping turtles."

"Then turtles never would have struck if I had treated them half-way decent," Si says to me mournfully. "That last look they gave me was more dumb reproach than anger."—N. Y. Sun.

Long Service in a Choir.
There are probably not many singers in Boston church choirs who have such a record as Henry Canning, the bass soloist at St. Augustine's Catholic church, on Dorchester street, South Boston, for Mr. Canning completed on Sunday, September 17, his twenty-fifth year at the church named, alone, his total number of years as a soloist being 35. He was with St. Joseph's church in the west end from 1861 to 1874, thus having done all of his church work at these two churches, and he was only 13 years of age when he took up the work at St. Joseph's. Besides participating in hundreds of concerts and the like he has, in his long experience, taken part in more than 4,000 church services.—Chicago Chronicle.

NAVAJOS INCREASING.

The Tribe Is Prosperous and Their Numbers Have Doubled in Thirty Years.

Those who believe that decadence is the heritage of the American Indian would do well to study the Navajo tribe. In 1868 it numbered 12,000 souls. To-day, through natural increase and not through immigration, almost entirely without admixture of other blood, there are 22,000 Navajos. Every individual tribesman appears prosperous. Many of the bucks are rich, even from the standpoint of the white man. It is roughly though conservatively estimated that the tribe has 1,600,000 sheep, 60,000 head of cattle, 300,000 goats and horses in such numbers as almost to defy enumeration. Horseflesh, indeed, is one of the main food staples. The ponies, not necessarily of poor stock, are unsalable, even at three dollars a head. A very large percentage of the wool crop is sold for shipment to Boston, just as is sold the crop of the white woolgrower. The Navajo blankets are still famous, though the better specimens are to be had only on payment of seemingly exorbitant prices. One of the main sources of the tribe's revenue now is from the sale of blankets that cost the purchaser little if any more than would blankets of ordinary mill manufacture. Most of this modern weaving is done, singly to relate, with ordinary Germantown yarn, brought to Arizona for the Indians by the car load. If special colors are required by the Indian weavers recourse is had to common dyes. Yet, despite this strange admixture of aboriginal handicraft and modern convenience, the Indian has never before so prospered.

Little assistance is received by the tribe from the general government, consisting only in occasional gifts of wagons and agricultural implements and in the support of schools. Throughout the Navajos have an independence that is refreshing. While they have a history far from peaceful, the casual traveler across the reservation is as safe as he would be in a New England village. Prospectors they dislike, a dislike shared by nearly all southwestern tribes. But they appreciate fully the power of the great chief in "Washington" and rarely molest fellow tribesmen or whites. Rugged health is the attribute of almost every individual, and there is every indication that coming centuries will know the Navajos as one of the most considerable of the subdivisions of population in the southwest.

The Navajo reservation is the largest in the union. Yet already it is too small for the expanding tribe, a fact appreciated in the Indian bureau. Negotiations are in progress for the purchase by the government of a considerable number of land claims to the westward of the reservation. When these have been secured the reservation line will be moved a number of miles further toward the setting sun. This advance of the Indian has in it nothing to cause apprehension to the white population of northern Arizona. A large part of the region now and hereafter to be occupied is only grazing land at the best, abounding in scenic features, but lacking in water.

The main property rights to be secured are at Tuba City, on Moen Copie Wash, 90 miles north of Flagstaff. Here Mormons, numbering 13 families, have been settled for 15 years. They cultivate about 300 acres of land, irrigated by a never-failing flow from Moen Copie creek. At Tuba is expected to arise the metropolis of the Navajos. When the Mormons are dispossessed the rich land will be divided up among a number of the more industrious Indians, and, to start them well in modern husbandry, the irrigation system is to be remodeled on the most approved lines. On the site of the present trader's store will be built an Indian school, for which an appropriation of $45,000 has already been made. The older Indians are not averse to progress and send their children to school in all good will. The little ones are remarkably bright and learn English readily.

For such people as are these it is easy to prophesy a prosperous future. Yet pastoral must they ever remain, eventually to become supreme in the west in the rearing of range cattle and sheep. Their lands, with little exception, are not arable and the scheme of farms in severally will never be tried with them. The tribe must continue as a tribe, a nation within our nation, independent, yet willingly subordinate to the white man's authority, with advantage over the white man because untaxed, thrifty and ever wealthy in the abundance of their flocks.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

An Anchor of the Armada.
A few days ago the crew of a trawler engaged in lobster fishing near Kinsale had great difficulty in getting their anchor aboard, which was firmly fixed in some massive hard substance in the sandbank. With great trouble they succeeded in bringing to the surface a very ancient anchor of five tons in weight, the shank being over ten feet in length, and the bend of equal proportions, with a small antique cannon attached thereto. The anchor, which probably belonged to one of the ships of the Spanish armada, which was wrecked on this coast, must have been imbedded in the sand for upwards of three centuries, and is covered with marine matter which, in the course of centuries, has been converted into a hard rocky fossil substance. The anchor is, of course, considerably worn, but it still presents a very massive appearance, and must have brought to a large ship. It has been brought to the lower slip of the Kinsale pier, where it is at present, and is an object of the very greatest interest and curiosity.—London Daily News.

LOUSE-PROOF ROOST.

It Can Be Lifted Off the Supports for Cleaning and to Give Access to the House.

Make a foundation of four-by-four scantling, in the shape of a frame, about as long as the building and wide enough to make the roosts of suitable capacity. For the perches use three-by-four or four-by-four scantlings, ripped through the middle so as to make two pieces four by one and one-half or four by two. The upper corners are rounded off as shown, and the perches are supported on standards of inch pipe 18 inches long, or half-inch iron rods. An old fruit can is attached to each support by being soldered at the bottom of the can, the top being left open. These cups are kept half full of coal oil or crude petroleum.

The roosts can be lifted off the supports for cleaning and to give access to the floor of the building. They may receive an application of coal oil or be whitewashed themselves occasionally. Instead of using the framework for foundation the pipes or rods may be simply driven into the ground in their proper places. In the cut but one support and one end of a perch are shown. The perch may be any length, and is supported at the end not shown in the same manner as at the one illustrated.—Orange Judd Farmer.

AMONG THE POULTRY.

Do not feed too much soft feed. Keep four ducks to one drake. Never use imperfect fowls for breeding.

Feed milk and bran for growth, milk and meal to fatten. Generally, the better the scratcher the better the layer.

When you get ready to fatten fowls, do the work quickly.

Separate the cocks from the hens; they molt better alone.

Game chickens, given a free range, are in danger of being overfed.

Get rid of the hens you do not intend to keep through the winter.

Hens require a variety of food; they get excessively tired of one kind.

The most successful fanciers are those that keep one or two breeds.

Hens should be killed when they are three years old; they lay fewer eggs after that.

Grain is sufficient in lime and mineral matter, but bran is rich in nitrogen and carbon.

Scalding fowls before picking partially cooks the delicate skin, rendering it dry and wrinkled.

While linseed and cottonseed meals are excellent foods, too much of them will cause a loss of feathers.

It rarely pays to spend much time trying to cure a bad case of roup or egg-bound in hens. Use the hatchet.

When your birds have bowel disease, change the food for a few days and at the same time change the grit.—St. Louis Republic.

Some Advice to Shippers.

Don't fail carefully to inspect your shipment before closing the box. Put in the memorandum on your own bill head, or an envelope, showing the count and other data. Keep a duplicate yourself, and thereby save much annoyance and frequently a loss. Don't chase off into a new market with untended people just because of a possible temporary advantage. Nine times out of ten you will lose. Keep in touch with a good house in several markets, and use judgment in shipping to any of them. Watch the reports and forecasts, and then allow for weather changes.—A Few Hens.

Use Pure-Bred Roosters.

With a small flock of 15 hens, which should raise during the season a hundred chickens easily, the use of a full-blood cock of some large breed will add 100 pounds to those hundred chickens if allowed to grow to maturity. The extra hundred pounds of flesh will be laid on without any additional cost of feeding, for a scrub chicken eats as much as a full-blooded one. This gain can be made by the purchase of a single good rooster, and should not cost over three dollars at most.—Guy E. Mitchell, in Farm and Fireside.

Lame Fowls Are Useless.

If the hen gets lame and continues so it is generally better to send her to the kettle. It has been the experience of many that a lame fowl stands round so much that she gets fat and stops laying. The queer thing is that she will be found to have no signs of eggs in her. This seems to be due to the fact that the fat has increased to such an extent that the formation of even embryonic eggs is discontinued. Why a fat fowl should stop forming eggs it is difficult to say, but it is a fact.—Farmers' Review.

MEETINGS OF FARMERS.

How Many Evenings Can Be Spent Profitably and Pleasantly in Rural Communities.

Now that the evenings are long farmers in every locality should get together and exchange experiences and views. Very often they can save each other many dollars by doing so. I have known a man to buy an implement, and on trying it find it worthless, or next thing to it; and the following year his neighbor bought one of the same kind, only to throw it aside soon after. If the first could have stated his experience with it at a meeting of his neighbors the second would have kept his money. If a certain kind of coal or other article that almost every family in the neighborhood uses is better than another that fact may be learned at these meetings. If one desires to butcher a beef, but can only use one quarter of it, he can easily dispose of the other three-quarters at one of these meetings. The principal benefits to be derived from these neighborhood gatherings lies in the social exchange of actual experiences, wants, etc. Very often a person can give more information that is of practical value to his neighbors in 20 words than an essayist or "orator of the evening" can in a thousand or more. If these meetings are made valuable and informing they will not be discontinued soon. If they are merely ornamental—to give Miss Smith an opportunity to surprise the neighborhood with an operatic song, or young sophomore Jones to cleave the air with one of his college orations, or old Mr. Robinson to give an hour's talk on nothing in particular—they will soon perish. When a man who has passed the flush of youth attends a meeting of any sort, and finds that he has learned something of real value to him, he will be on hand at the next. To be sure, a little ornament is an attraction, but usefulness is the card that draws and holds.—Fred Grundy, in Farm and Fireside.

LIGHT, FIRM LADDER.

It Is Safe and Does Not Break a Thin-Soled Boot in Two When Stepped Upon.

It is made of boards, and the steps are three inches in width (as are the sides.) They are held in place by screws. Each one is also supported by a three-eighths-inch iron rod that passes through from side to side, with a head and a washer on one end and a nut on the other. These rods keep the ladder from spreading, and make the breaking of a step impossible—giving a safe ladder and one that does not break the thin-soled boot nearly in two when stepped upon.—N. Y. Tribune.

VARIETIES OF WHEAT.

Not Much Difference in the Yields from the Six Kinds Standing at the Head.

The comparison of new and standard varieties of wheat by the Pennsylvania State College Agricultural Experiment station has been continued through the present season. The six varieties giving the highest yields were:

	Bushels.
Royal Red Clawson	26.87
Forty-Fold or Gold Coin	26.30
Dawson's Golden Chaff	26.14
Century	25.71
Rochester Red	25.44
Reliable	25.14

Twenty-two varieties were tested, the average yield being 22.02 bushels. There was an average difference of 3.02 bushels between the smooth and bearded varieties, in favor of the smooth. About one-fourth of the grain was winter-killed, which accounts for the small average yield, it being only about two-thirds of our usual crop. The average yield of straw was 2,450 pounds and the average weight per bushel 62.04 pounds. Turkish Red was the poorest variety, yielding 15.37 bushels of grain and 1,590 pounds of straw. The yields of ten varieties that have been tested for nine and ten years show no tendency to run out except a slight decrease in the yield of straw.

A bulletin giving a complete record of all the varieties for a series of years is in preparation and will be distributed free of charge.—Enos H. Hess, in National Stockman.

George Theory on Trial.

Germany is submitting to a practical test in its newly-acquired Chinese possessions the land theory advocated by the late Henry George. The Chinese residents having been expatriated, the use of the land is now sold to European settlers and business men, with reversion to the German authorities every three years. A similar experiment is being made by the German government in New Guinea. The outcome will be watched with very great interest by students of economics the world over.

Hens cease to lay when improperly fed or when in a diseased condition.

APPENDICITIS IN CATS.

A Fine San Francisco Feline Submits to the Knife Without Resistance.

Maltese cats are in large demand among business houses not only because of their beauty, but because they have proved themselves to be fine hunters. One of the handsomest of these is Tom, a magnificent fellow belonging to a wholesale grocer in lower California street, or perhaps it would be more correct to say that the cat owns the establishment. He spends his nights in useful labor and is sometimes for a considerable period found regularly each morning with a big dead rat by his side, far, like most of the genuinely capable of his kind, he disdains to eat his game. During the day he has appropriated to his own use a nicely finished mail tray on the office desk, and when the weather is cool a big nickel lamp standing beside the tray is kept burning for his especial benefit. A fit of indigestion very nearly carried him off one day and it became necessary to perform a surgical operation to save the noble fellow's life. He seemed to know that the veterinary surgeon's lancet was unheated for his good and bore the pain like a stoic and without resistance.

Young Tom in beauty and intelligence and his almost exact counterpart in size and appearance is Joe, a splendid maltese of Petaluma birth, belonging to a wholesale boot and shoe house on the corner of Second and Stevenson streets. Eyes of amber, a coat of silky blue-gray, sinewy frame and comely rather than tigerish face. Joe is a magnificent specimen of cathood. He not only answers to his name, but understands and will obey simple directions issued by his master, jumping on desk or chair at his bidding or playing with a cord strung across the entrance in the office rail.

An instance of cat devotion of an extraordinary sort is found in a wholesale dairy establishment on the east side of Front street, near California. Here is a wee motherless gray kitten, so small that it can sit comfortably on one's hand. In the store are five grown cats—common cats of no pedigree, toms and tabbies—and this elder band has assumed maternal care of the forlorn little orphan. They watch it vigilantly, seeming particularly apprehensive lest it stray out upon the street, and whenever one of them perceives him too near the open doors the older fellow walks over to the kitten, picks it up in its mouth and gravely carries it back and deposits it in the rear of the store.—San Francisco Chronicle.

AMERICANS FOND OF EGGS.

Per Capita Consumption of Hen Fruit in This Country About a 150 Yearly.

An English statistician has estimated that the use of eggs in the United Kingdom amounts to about 42 eggs per year for each head of population. But, according to available American statistics, this would be altogether too low an estimate for the consumption in this country. When one begins to figure on probable egg production in the United States startling figures are encountered. Considering that a population of about 4,000,000 people is served with eggs from the receipts at New York city, the consumption in this vicinity would seem to be about 250 eggs per year for each person. Probably this is a greater average consumption than would be found to prevail in the whole country, but it would be reasonable to estimate an average of 150 eggs for each person in the United States—about three eggs per week each. This would necessitate a production of say 10,500,000,000 eggs, about 26,000,000 cases, averaging 40 eggs each. When it is considered that the receipts in New York alone are about one-tenth of this amount, while the population using the New York receipts is little more than one-twentieth of the whole, it would seem certain that the above estimate is below, rather than above, the fact.

If all these eggs were placed in a row lengthwise they would form a solid chain of eggs nearly 340,000 miles long—long enough to encircle the earth more than 14 times, or to reach 100,000 miles beyond the moon. If they were packed in cases of an average size and these were piled on top of each other in the usual way, they would make a tower of egg cases over 5,000 miles high, or they would stretch 10,000 miles if the cases were placed end to end. If the hens of the country average 103 eggs per year each this rate of production would indicate a population of 100,000,000 hens, not to speak of roosters and nonlaying chickens. At an average price of 12 cents per dozen the egg crop at this rate of calculation would represent a value of $105,000,000 per year.—Chicago Chronicle.

Value Male Birds Most.

In the canary-breeding establishments of Germany only the male birds are valued, for the females never sing. The method of training the birds to sing is to put them in a room where there is an automatic whistle, which they all strive to imitate. The breeder listens to the efforts of the birds and picks out the most apt pupils, which are then placed in another room for further instruction. These are the best singers and ultimately fetch high prices. The less gifted birds are sorted into second and third quality and are sold, while those which show no vocal powers are destroyed.—Chicago Chronicle.

Its engineers believe that they have solved the problem of the successful completion of this great enterprise. If so, it will prove a great benefit to humanity, no more, truthfully speaking, than has Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the remedy which never fails to cure afflictions of the stomach—for of what use is prosperity without health? The Bitters invariably strengthens weak stomachs and torpid livers, and is one of the blessings of the age.

A Nude Departure.

Husband—That gown appears to be cut considerably lower than your last one.
Wife—Yes; the dressmakers have departed somewhat from the lines of last season's models.
"I see. A nude departure."—Philadelphia Record.

Every reader of this paper should give special heed to the offers which are appearing from week to week by the John M. Smyth Co., the mammoth mail order house of Chicago. In this issue will be found their advertisement of a thoroughly up-to-date, first-class sewing machine, at the astonishingly low price of $14.25. Coming as this offer and other offers do from a house with a commercial rating of over one million dollars, and of the highest character, they mark an opportunity that the shrewd buyer will not be slow to take advantage of. The John M. Smyth Co., 150 to 166 West Madison street, will send their mammoth catalogue, in which is listed at wholesale prices everything to eat, wear and use, on receipt of only 10 cents to partly pay postage and expressage, and even this 10 cents is allowed on first purchase amounting to one dollar.

WOMEN do suffer!

Even so-called healthy women suffer! But they are not healthy! The marks left by pain are on the young faces of many of our daughters. Pain that leaves its mark comes from a curable cause. If that cause is not removed its influence reaches out and overshadows a whole life. The reason Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been so uniformly successful for over a quarter of a century in overcoming the suffering of women, is that it is thorough and goes directly to the cause. It is a woman's remedy for woman's ills.

MISS EMILY F. HAAS, of 148 Freeman St., Greenpoint, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I wish to state that I used your Vegetable Compound with the greatest success. I was very sick for nearly a year with hysteria, was down-hearted and nervous; also suffered with painful menstruation and pain in back and limbs. I often wished for death, thinking nothing would cure me. I had doctors, but their medicines did me no good. At last, by the advice of a friend, I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am happy to say it has entirely cured me.

JENNIE SHERMAN, of Fremont, Mich., Box 748, writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I feel that I must write you and tell you what your medicine has done for me. I had neuralgia of the stomach for two years, so bad that I could not do any work. I had two or three doctors, but did not seem to get any better. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills and improved from the first, had better appetite, and after taking three bottles of Compound and one box of Liver Pills, can say that I am cured. Your Vegetable Compound is a wonderful medicine."

August Flower.

"It is a surprising fact," says Prof. Houton, "that in my travels in all parts of the world, for the last ten years, I have met more people having used Green's August Flower than any other remedy, for dyspepsia, deranged liver and stomach, and for constipation. I find for tourists and salesmen, or for persons filling office positions where headaches and general bad feelings from irregular habits exist, that Green's August Flower is a grand remedy. It does not injure the system by frequent use, and is excellent for sour stomachs and indigestion." Sample bottles free at J. A. Wilson's. Sold by dealers in all civilized countries.
